DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-3 and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Fry-Welch et al (5,163,443)

Regarding claim 1, Fry-Welch et al teaches an apparatus for assessing a person's hand strength comprising: means (50) for engaging the hand; and means (40) for determining the strength of the hand based on a twisting action with the hand of the engaging means relative to the determining means (col. 4, lines 60-63), the engaging means connected to the determining means (fig. 2); and an indicator that shows the strength of the hand (58)

Regarding claims 2 and 10, Fry-Welch et al teaches a system for testing hand, wrist, and forearm strength comprising a torque sensor (17, col. 4, lines 38-39).

Regarding claim 3, Fry-Welch et al teaches a system for testing hand, wrist, and forearm strength comprising a torque sensor (17, col. 4, lines 38-39)

Allowable Subject Matter

2. Claims 4-9 and 11-13 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed November 21, 2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Fry-Welch specifically teaches to determine the strength of the hand, wrist and forearm but does so by not allowing the cables, which are squeezed to move.

Examiner disagrees. In col. 2, lines 61-65, Fry-Welch teaches a rotary device is provided for measuring a torque applied by the limb of a living being. The rotary device may be in the form of a rotatable member with a handle coupled thereto affixed to an intermediate support, and coupled to at least one of the flexible cables. On the contrary, the cables are flexible and are able to allow a twisting motion.

Applicant argues that the cited reference teaches away from the limitation of "means for determining the strength of the hand based on a twisting action".

Examiner disagrees. Once again, examiner point to col. 1, lines 25-28, lines 40-43, 45-48 and col. 2, lines 30-33, which teaches force curves during wrist and forearm motions, which would include a twisting action.

Conclusion

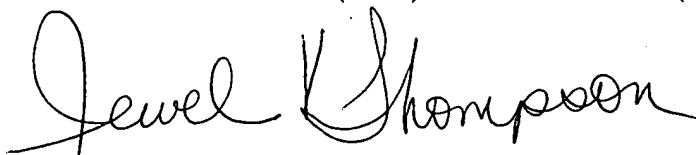

4. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
